

McAdams, John

From: Mendoza, Karina
Sent: Tuesday, January 10, 2017 3:08 PM
To: McAdams, John
Subject: Faculty Conversations on Learning Reminder

Dear John:

Good afternoon! This email serves as confirmation and reminder of your enrollment in Wednesday's Faculty Conversations on Learning: Sparking Curiosity in our Students. This event will be held in Eckstein Hall, 4th floor conference center and begins at 8:30 a.m. Please see schedule below.

Faculty Conversations on Learning
January 11, 2017

Eckstein Hall (Law School) 4th floor conference room

Freedom Dreams Now: Whose Lives Matter?
A challenge for academics

The goals of this interdisciplinary all-campus faculty day are to:

- Provide a framework to discuss the social movements around African American, Latin, Native American, Muslim and others on the margins
- Explore strategies for responding to student resistance to learning about the protest strategies of these groups
- Engage in interdisciplinary dialogue and conversation with faculty and students about the impact of these movements at Marquette and the Milwaukee community

8:30 a.m. Welcome, Invocation (coffee available)

8:45a.m. Wade in the Water: Understanding the Multicultural Wave
Joseph Brown, S.J, director of Africana Studies, SIU

9:45 a.m. Discussion/Q and A

10:15 a.m. Break

10:30 a.m. The Rhetoric of Black Protest
Cedric Burrows, Assistant professor, English

11:30 a.m. Islamophobia in Action
Louise Cainkar, Associate professor, Social and Cultural Sciences
Q and A

12:30 p.m. Lunch

1:15p.m. Whose Lives Matter? Faculty/student roundtable

Simon Howard, Assistant professor, Psychology; Heather Hathaway, Director of Africana Studies and Professor, English Department

2:15p.m.

Taking Action at MU: Where Do We Go From Here?

Sameena Mulla, Associate professor, Social and Cultural Sciences

Co-sponsored by: The College of Arts and Sciences; The Center for Teaching & Learning, the Office of the Provost, The Jesuit Community at Marquette University, and Manresa for Faculty